OIF Helps Organize Rare Bone Disease Capitol Hill Advocacy Day September 18, 2013

The OIF helped to organize and execute a Capitol Hill advocacy day on September 18, 2013. In all, more than 30 advocates from across the United States visited 35 congressional offices representing 10 states. The advocates educated lawmakers and staff about both the real-life impact of rare bone diseases and the common challenges we face. This important event helped build the groundwork necessary to begin working directly with lawmakers to increase investments in medical research that will benefit the entire rare bone disease community.
